

$1,000,000,000 Loss of Wealth | The Fall of the Online Black Conscious Community

Part 1. Zaza, Boyce, and Polight

For Black people who consume online content made for (Conscious) Black people, there is a pool of content providers to choose from. They all have a certain specialty or angle, but the core ideals are the same. They pretend to be your friend and allow you to hang out and video chat with them. They address you on the live streams with words like, "Family or Melanated Family." They also ask for money. I don't have a problem with that. The problem is, we don't have time to keep wasting 4 and 5 hours watching videos talking about the same topics. Millions of able-bodied Black folks are sitting at their computers watching the fake beefs between their favorite YouTubers all day. OR they are sending their money to their favorite YouTuber. This doesn't make sense.

There is hope for ending this madness. People are speaking out and getting results. The Zaza Ali fiasco is the latest drama on Black YouTube. It's also first certified scam pulled on the people. Here is exactly how she tried to run the play:

1. She realizes her run as a Yoni expert is almost over. She uses intention and prays to the Divine Feminine to devise a plan.
2. She creates/promotes/sells 10 tickets to a fake retreat for women and charges $1499 for each ticket.
3. She then waits until the one day before the retreat to tell the attendees she has been in an accident and the retreat has been canceled. She hoped the women would fall for it like they did with the fake stolen laptop hustle.

Two of the women couldn't take the L on the chin. They went to the local news station. The investigative reporter got all of the receipts on Zaza. The hotel where the retreat was supposed to be held was never paid a deposit. This means Zaza was planning to steal the money WAY before the supposed accident. This is clear proof of an intentional scam that played out in real-time. They didn't wait a long time. The event had no chance of taking place. Zaza didn't keep the attendees updated on the status of the event. Zaza claims to have refunded all of the money. But the point is she stole it in the first place. Case closed. On to the next one.

The Boyce Watkins time/energy/money syphoning campaign is also coming to a much needed halt. Formerly known as the 'People's Scholar,' he spends 5-6 hours per day screaming profanities at his I-phone. He does nothing but blame whitey and give us insight on the same current events all the rest of these guys and girls talk about. This is redundant and unnecessary. He needs to go away like the rest of them so the real work can be done. I've followed his career for at least 5 years. In my opinion, he really only started making some real traction last year with the Bitcoin wave. Here is the entire 3-W Affinity Fraud Conspiracy laid out in 3 steps.

1. Boyce Watkins (the front man) hired Charles Wu (the mastermind), to help him boost his clout and syphon more money from the Black Community. Wu refused to work for free so Boyce borrowed some money from his girlfriend to pay for Wu's services. Wu changed Boyce's image from the polished scholar to the Potty-mouth Black Power Economics ex-scholar. Wu also told Boyce about the impending rise of Bitcoin and Legal Weed online. Boyce knew exactly what to do.

2. Remember, before the Bitcoin thing, Boyce was just a normal YouTuber with a few websites. I exposed those sites in September 2016. They had little to no traction. Once Boyce paid Wu, he had no money to invest in web design or marketing. Plus, we was clueless about Bitcoin and weed. He called his friend Lamar Wilson and made him an offer. We promised him a Bitcoin-based Facebook career and lots of faithful followers. He even gave him a gimmick, 'love'. Lamar is a loveable guy so this act was an easy role to play for him. Unfortunately, Bitcoin dropped. They created Wacoinda to stretch the scam out a little longer. They created a bunch of fake projects and learning platforms to keep the followers busy. Everyone passes their worthless tokens in Facebook Groups all day while Lamar walked off with several million bucks from the token dump.
3. The Wacoinda thing is pretty much over and obviously would never generate any big money in the first place. The Green Rush is a final attempt to prey on the emotions of Blacks. Charles Wu and Boyce had a fake beef and now can't work together anymore. Boyce hired his brother Lawrence (the Weed Czar) to step in front of the camera. They do videos but the videos aren't getting much traction. The legal weed scam is pretty thin and the value proposition is weak. They use silly stock video footage at hair salons to attempt to connect with Black women. Unfortunately, even Wu can't spin this drivel into something viable.

Brother Polight's scam was one of the most brilliant yet simple.

1. Pretend to be smart and rich by having pseudo-intellectual debates and stunting on Instagram with his rented wives, cars, houses, and goons.
2. Entice people to send his wives and flunkies money via Western Union.
3. Pay some of the most aggressive victims some of their money and ignore the rest.
4. For last few years, he hasn't even been debating or dropping valuable knowledge. But he continues the constant stunting for the fans.

I've been following the Brother Polight scam saga for many years. Until today, none of the accusers or stories seemed credible. Many of the people seemed to have mental issues and didn't actually know what they were buying. Some paid for mentoring and just didn't seem to approve of the quality of service. Some of the people received their products/refunds late. These issues are examples of poor customer service not technically scams. We have new information about a police report being filed. This changes our position on him. Polight is now on our radar.

This is just the beginning.

We are dedicated to cleansing the Online Black Conscious Community. If you or someone you know has been scammed by anyone online, let us know. Don't be scared or ashamed. We are not here to judge you. We want to hear your story. We are working with consumer advocates and attorneys to assemble class-action, small-claims, civil fraud legal remedies. Unlike the drama on social media, our work is done in private among trusted individuals. Please Send your stories and screenshots/video proof to igotscammed@blexit.fund.

We spend a great deal of time and money reaching the people. Please consider becoming a financial supporter of the Blexit Fund. We are currently working with several non-profit groups and small business owners while we push the bad actors out of the way.

We have 3 ways to donate at the bottom of this landing page <https://blexit.fund/>.

Unlike the rest of these internet entertainers, we actually do the work. We have 100% transparency with those who support us. You don't finance someone's drug habit or shoe fetish. You support real people who you can connect with and form bonds with.
